

“Falling”

Lyrics: Zoe Howard
Music: Chris Gierymski

She's divine
Can't see how
She's all mine
And I mean, I'm wrapped around her finger.
Breathing just feels right
I've never seen
Colors so bright
Mosaics of whispers that linger.
The comfort laying next to her
'Cause I can be myself with her
The silence in the air says it all.
I'm ready to fall.

Same routine
Cracks form, doubt
Gets between
I cling to the myth that plays an echo.
Ask me if I'll run
Flowers wilt with
Too much sun
The answer is always an echo.
It's ugly and it's beautiful
It's messy, it's inscrutable
The silence in the air says it all.
I'm scared of the fall.

Maybe love is meant to be temporary
Like a sunny day or the burdens we carry.
Maybe holding onto someone
Just because they're comfortable
Is not a sacrifice we should make.
There are other paths we should take
Despite how much it aches.
But maybe that means it's okay
That the sun still comes up the next day anyway

Anyway
Here we are
Side by side
In my car
I'm playing chess with a conversation.
Looking in her eyes
Trying to guess
When she lies
Is this really a conversation?
Now all we tried so hard to keep
Is stripped away, reduced and cheap
The silence in the air says it all
So I embrace the fall.
Falling, falling...
Still
I am glad to fall.